Woot! Your flashcards are generating now. Head over here to start studying.

Looks like you're new here! Let's help you get started in a few steps. If you want to skip the setup and just look at some cards, click below. You can always do it later.

Let's do it later, brah.

I've looked through your browser history, and found that you've used the following sites for translations. Please let me know which ones are OK to use to generate flash cards. If you change your mind later, you can always come back to enable or disable other sites:

- ☒ Google Translate
- ☒ Duden Online
- ☒ Wiktionary

Those sites look good to me.

Everyone has different opinions about flashcards. Please check off your preferences.

- ☐ an English translation on the other side (otherwise, it's only in the other
- ☒ definitions and examples in the other language to prompt me.
- ☒ a picture prompt to help me remember

That's the way I like it.

Sweet. I've put together a few decks for you. Click on the language you want to study now.

Once you start studying a language, I'll keep track of cards that are up for review, and put a little reminder in your browser bar if there are some that are ready. Click on it to open a new window and start studying.

As you browse the web and use your translation services, I'll keep generating new flashcards for you. No fuss.

Congratulations, you've finished all your cards today for German!

Cards will be available again tomorrow. If you do additional translation today, words you don't know will be added automatically to your deck.
